

Drawing From Hat Only Plan Overlooked in Convention Impasse

FRANTIC HUNT FOR LOCKSMITH

Rife Suspicion Bars Hope of Workable Proposal

Field Narrowed as Cox and Ralston Drop Out

Leaders Confer on Futility of Further Ballots

Baker picked up a few outside his own State, he made no substantial headway.

Just before adjournment tonight, the convention laughed down a resolution by Edward Fernstrom, of Hudson, Mich., proposing that the convention formally call upon McAdoo and Smith to withdraw in the interest of party harmony.

The question was put to the McAdoo and Smith delegates, comprising more than four-fifths of the convention, and the proposal was defeated.

Five ballots were taken at the two o'clock session and at the fifth ballot the Smith delegates had 511 1-3, a majority of 1-3 votes from the 511 delegates in the hall.

Smith's strength at tonight's adjournment was 511 1-3, compared to 511 1-3 last night. All the others remained far behind.

The rise in the McAdoo total was due largely to the gain of 30 in Indiana, coupled with a return of Oklahoma to the McAdoo column, and the convention reassembled groups in scattering States during a terrific floor drive just before the close of the session tonight.

The McAdoo delegates declared the total of 530 reached on the sixty-ninth ballot represented the absolute minimum of the campaign managers for the former Treasury head.

It was announced by those close to Gov. Smith that had he been elected, he would have brought a message of reconciliation, explaining the reasons for his withdrawal from the race.

Some of those who are trying to break into the favorite son States and sweep the fields of them believe that both Smith and McAdoo are convinced before they are virtually alone in the balloting that neither can be nominated, and that the leaders are set down to the business of selecting a third man.

With the convention tied in a head lock, there is nothing to be done but to wait for a change of heart to be given some consideration by a considerable group of delegates. On the other hand, some delegates are inclined to hope to escape general condemnation because the convention now is composed of solidified groups, and the business of whatever may be offered.

The suggestion most widely spoken of tonight, perhaps, was the one to provide for the elimination on successive ballots of the candidates with the smallest number of votes on each ballot. The anti-McAdoo following looked upon this as first as a pure bluff.

After an infinite number of ballots, the convention would reach that stage where the only candidates would be the two men who had the most votes. Then if either McAdoo or Smith were able to bind more than one-third of the delegates to his standard, there would be a final impasse, and new ones would be necessary.

The difficulty about this suggestion, as well as the hundred and one others brought out during the balloting, only to be waved aside with scant consideration, was that no way could be agreed upon to bring it before the delegates as a serious order of business, because of the universal suspicion of both delegates and leaders.

One suggestion was the simultaneous breaking of both the two-thirds rule governing nominations and the unit rule, which controls the voting in the delegations. This effectively would break up the blocs of purely favorite son votes and undoubtedly would result in some candidates receiving a majority in the convention, but it was considered doubtful whether it would mean along any candidate would reach the necessary two-thirds.

Still another proposal was that at some stage of the voting, to be decided by agreement of the convention itself, the nominations for President and Vice-President be taken to the two men who had the most votes in the voting. It was argued that this would bring out the strength of the leaders and that the nominations would go to the real choices of the delegates.

HEOTIC DAY SESSION

In the hectic day session, which saw the withdrawal of Ralston and Cox from the race, the convention developed a semblance of unanimity on only one subject—that it wanted to adjourn for dinner.

Accordingly it did adjourn the afternoon session to resume at 2:30 o'clock. In the meantime, the McAdoo forces had, by the exercise of their one-third veto power, defeated a proposal that candidates be invited to exhibit themselves to the convention and speak. Then the McAdoo forces voted to explain that Gov. Smith has the opportunity to speak.

On the first proposal the Smith forces and the Cox and Ralston forces were in favor of the resolution proposed by Gen. Cox of Massachusetts, but failed to poll a necessary two-thirds majority.

necessary two-thirds majority, the vote being 551 to 538. On the proposal to invite Gov. Smith to speak, however, the anti-McAdoo coalition, including the Smith forces, although they failed to command a two-thirds majority, to put it through, did poll more than a majority with a vote of 604 to 415, and it was the first occasion on which any faction had polled a majority of the convention on any schedule but adjournment and adjesting of the platform.

The developments of the day's session merely served to emphasize the deadlock in which the two leaders find themselves.

Senator Ralston of Indiana, withdrew from the race, the McAdoo quickly followed by James M. Cox of Ohio. The thought probably was that the line of favorite sons was being discussed again and a vote might follow the example and give the convention a chance to make a solid choice between McAdoo and Smith.

delegate has a right to vote his own convictions, Mr. Bryan contended. Gov. Fay followed Mr. Bryan, contending for the application of the unit rule.

Chairman Walsh decided that the unit rule in Tennessee bound the delegates to the instruction to vote for McAdoo so long as his name was before the convention.

A Colorado delegate, wearing of the spontaneous balloting, moved to adjourn, "so that the so-called leaders may have more time to decide in they want to do."

The motion to adjourn is always in order and a vote on it couldn't be denied. By a heavy majority, however, the convention decided to remain in session and go it a little longer.

Connecticut took a half-vote from McAdoo and gave it to Smith. Massachusetts gave a half-vote to Marcus A. Coolidge of Fitchburg, taking it from Gov. Smith. Even the delegates from Nebraska, a vote going to a Coolidge in a Democratic national convention.

There was a break in West Virginia in the sixty-eighth ballot. The sixteenth, which had been going solidly to John W. Davis, broke one. One went to Baker and one to Coolidge. The remainder stayed with Davis.

ROGERS GETS ONE

In the sixty-eighth ballot Will Rogers, the cowboy comedian-reporter, got one vote. It was a newspaper gallery joke, in which a delegate was put up to include his name in a ballot. Whereupon a delegate from Illinois asked unanimously consent to permit Rogers to address the convention.

At this time the hall was filled with laughter and cries of "We've heard worse." Chairman Walsh smiled at the situation and winked at the delegates. The question to the convention, ordered the roll call to proceed to the sixty-ninth ballot.

Michigan changed her vote on this ballot, going 25 to McAdoo and 5 for Smith. The McAdoo delegates, the most of it, for a demonstration.

North Carolina re-elected Josephus Daniels with 3 1/2 votes, one-half of which came from the McAdoo column: 1 from Underwood and 1 from Davis.

Oklahoma had been voting steadily for Senator Owen, switched to McAdoo.

During the demonstration over the question of adjournment, Smith delegates in the Pennsylvania delegation became aroused when a delegate from Smith took pictures of Gov. Smith and threw them on the floor. In a fight that followed over the State standard, Mrs. Moore, a Smith delegate, was struck on the head by a standard. She was moved from the hall after her husband had been dressed.

At this point McAdoo had climbed to the 530 mark gave his supporters opportunity for another demonstration. There was a number of men around the McAdoo delegation, by which many other States participated.

It was announced by those close to Gov. Smith that had he been elected, he would have brought a message of reconciliation, explaining the reasons for his withdrawal from the race.

Georgia had married a Georgian who was a slave-owner. Under the laws of Georgia the slaves of his wife became legally his own, although he was not a Georgian. The majority of the general conference as a result declared that he cease exercising the function of a bishop of the church as long as he remained a slave-owner.

Bishop Andrew declared he had done nothing contrary to the moral teaching of the church. He was nominated and elected to the office of bishop, and that no charge of immorality, maladministration, or any other kind of misconduct against the church had been brought.

The tension arising from the situation resulted in a mutual agreement by the Northern and Southern members to separate, and to hold a widespread impression that the Southern members "withdrew" from the conference.

The Supreme Court of the United States later held that the rupture was a mutual proposition.

KERNVILLE FIRE MENACES PASS

Blaze Under Control After Wind Subsides

New Fighters Sent to Stony Canyon Region

Santa Barbara Forest Also Hit by Flames

BAKERSFIELD, July 4.—Fire which threatened the town of Kernville yesterday, under pressure of a west wind, is now under control, according to information received here from the A. Brown Company of Kernville. Throughout a large part of yesterday the wind, intensifying the approaching flames, whipped sparks into the heart of the town. Additional forces of men battled the fire, every person available being put to work. With the cessation of the breeze the fire was brought under control and the menace of the town was eliminated.

The home of John Noyer, caught in the blaze, was burned to the ground and a feed barn belonging to him also was consumed by the flames at a loss estimated at $3000. The Noyer ranch was outside of the town. At this time the fire was burning fiercely in the region of Stony Canyon, northwest of Kernville. The Kernville fire was not on the ranch, but some six hours prior to the ranch. No response could be evoked from the San Emidio ranch when called on the telephone. Word from the land company, however, was that the fire is believed to be burning in the Santa Barbara reserve.

Liberals and Conservatives Test Strength

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
LONG BEACH, July 4.—City Councilmen took office today and the contest for mayor is in sight. The choice of mayor is the main issue in the coming election, and the liberals and conservatives are testing their strength.

LOCAL LAUGHS

Each week The Times produces a film entitled "Local Laughs," containing the best jokes submitted by local people. Weekly prizes are paid of $10 and $5 to the winners. A list of theaters showing the film, together with the names and addresses of winners, appear only on the screen. Jokes submitted for consideration will be given a place of honor on The Times comic page each week, and each of these contributors will receive a souvenir of appreciation.

Teacher: No pencil again? What would you think of a soldier who went into battle without his gun?
Bobby: I'd think he was an officer.
E. J. Pivers, Box 315, Lankershim.

First John: I suppose you like that new $35 suit with two pairs of pants?
Second John: Yes, I like the suits, but it's hot wearing both pairs of pants.
Harry L. Crook, Box 1128, Compton, Cal.

Jack: What's the difference between satisfied and contented?
Jim: "Well, I'm satisfied my girl is stepping out with other fellows, but I'm not a bit contented."

If you want to see how the prehistoric dinosaur, Ichthyosaurus, brontosaurus and the other woolly beasts of those days really used to cut up when they had the world to themselves, you are going to have your chance.

These creatures will be the real stars of what will doubtless be the most remarkable picture in many ways which has ever been filmed. This feature is the picturization of Conan Doyle's bizarre story, "The Lost World," which First National is making.

The descriptive and colorful Desert Suite which is comprised of three movements, was a significant number on the varied program. This composition is the work of the Los Angeles composer, Homer Griggs. "Mirage," the third number of the suite, contained some interesting passages for the wood winds and brasses. Other numbers, particularly worthy of mention were the "Orpheus" overture, by Offenbach, and

Other Important stories are "The Narrow Street," which William Beaudine is directing with Prevost and Willard Louis: "Simon Called Peter," which has been retitled "Recompense," at Monte Blue and Irene Rich will be featured, with Harry Beaumont directing; Ernst Lubitch's production is not yet named. "The Bridge of Sighs," written by Charles K. Harris: "The Dear Pretender," by Alice Ross Colver, which will serve as a starring vehicle for June Marlow, with John Roche sharing honors and James J. Flood directing; "The Man Without a Conscience," by Max Kretzer, to be directed by William Beaudine: "Erie Love," which will be directed by Harry Beaumont, and will feature Marie Prevost, Willard Louis and Irene Rich. "My Wife and I," by Paul Bern, featuring Monte Blue and Irene Rich will be featured.

The steamer for San Francisco, whence she will embark on Tuesday, should sail on a business basis, with each party retaining their separate home and individual identity. The drangle theme is lightened by the deft comedy of Lee Moran and, all in all, "Daring Youth" is one of the novelties of the season.

LIVE-STOCK AND MEAT INDUSTRY

Bank Analyzes Position of Important Industry

Population Growing Faster Than Stock Production

Per Capita Consumption of Beef Shows Decline

"Population has outstripped the live-stock supply in the United States," says the National Bank of Commerce in the July issue of Commerce Monthly. "And this country has lost its premier position as an exporter of beef, although it remains the leading shipper of pork products." Continuing the bank says:

"The United States is one of the largest producers of live stock but most of the product is consumed within the country. It is estimated that on January 1, 1924 there were in the United States 65,000,000 cattle, 65,000,000 hogs and 35,000,000 sheep. In number of cattle the country is surpassed only by British India and in number of hogs by China, Argentina and Australia. Both carry more sheep than the United States.

"The outstanding feature of the industry in this country is the fact that population has overtaken the supply of meat animals. Since the nineties the estimated total number of cattle in the country has not increased and the number of hogs only slightly, while the number of sheep has declined. Meanwhile, population has grown steadily.

EXPORTS DECLINE

"During the period since that time exports of meat have decreased and per capita consumption has grown smaller.

"Pork exports, exclusive of lard, reached their former maximum of $17,000,000 in 1913 and by the time war began had fallen away more than half. It was not until 1921 that exports of beef reached their former peak of $10,000,000, but the decline thereafter was rapid and in 1924 the country was actually on a net import basis. Since the war, however, as to increased production and reduced consumption during the war, exports of pork have been reduced. Those of beef reached $10,000,000 in 1921, while pork shipments in 1923 amounted to $14,000,000.

"The special circumstances of that period had disappeared. However, the former trend was resumed. By 1921 exports of beef had again fallen to their former proportions and were practically balanced by imports. The downward trend of pork exports was unusually large. In that year over $10,000,000 of pork were shipped abroad.

BEER PRODUCTION

"Over the period 1907-23 beer production has remained practically stationary with a tendency downward rather than upward. While the output of beer has increased, mutton and lamb production stands about where it did at the beginning of the period, but amounts to less than in the year just before the war. Pork and lamb show a very definite upward tendency in production, even extending to the phenomenal output in 1923.

"Measured on a per capita basis, however, there appears to be a general tendency toward less consumption of meat in the United States. Reliable figures are not available for the years before 1923, but estimates based upon census reports of the cattle supply indicate that in the case of beef, at least, per capita consumption has declined steadily after the decade of 1890-99, when the open range passed the height of its development. The use of the pork in the new high record in 1923 and the amount of beef consumed per person had been exceeded in only one year after 1921.

PER CAPITA CONSUMPTION

"The United States stands in an intermediate position in meat consumption between the producers of heavy surplus and those countries of Europe which require imports. At the latest date for which information is available Argentina was estimated to have had a per capita consumption of all kinds of meat amounting to 231 pounds. The average for the United States over the period was 187 pounds.

"Canada stood not far below the United States, with 137 pounds of meat consumed per capita, and Cuba showed 124 pounds. Next came the two most highly industrialized nations of Europe, the United Kingdom with 120 pounds per capita and Germany with 116 pounds. A marked difference in rate of consumption existed between these countries and France, standing next, where the quantity available for each person was only eighty pounds. Italy with forty-seven pounds had the lowest per capita consumption among the countries for which data are available.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO IS OVERTURNED

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE)

SACRAMENTO, July 4.—Mrs. Dorothy Wildgrube of Fresno was killed instantly on the lower Stockton road south of this city today when an automobile driven by her husband, H. J. Wildgrube, struck a rut, became unmanageable and turned over. Wildgrube received minor injuries. Two children of the couple escaped unhurt.

ON FIRM FOUNDATION

Review of Business in Pacific Southwest Shows No Depression; Investment Market Strong

"There is a growing accumulation of evidence that the Pacific Southwest has a solid foundation for continuing prosperity and that there is no likelihood of anything comparable to a depression developing in this territory, in spite of a psychology favorable to such a movement in some circles."

This is the statement contained in the Monthly Summary of Conditions in the Pacific Southwest, compiled by the Research department of The First National Bank of Los Angeles, the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank and the First Security Company, released for publication today.

The summary reaches this conclusion after having stated that "the water and power situation has caused definite concern, and with the exception of cotton and citrus fruits indications are that agricultural production in this territory will be somewhat subnormal."

The report, in part, follows:

GENERAL SUMMARY

Seasonal factors have dominated the business situation in the Pacific Southwest. In many cases there has been a healthy tendency to make commitments until such time as the effect of the climatic situation upon agricultural production can be more definitely determined. In addition, the usual quiet incident to the summer vacation period has been observed. The water and power situation has caused definite concern, and with the exception of cotton and citrus fruits indications are that agricultural production in this territory will be somewhat subnormal.

However, conditions are not such as to change the definite section, heretofore made in these reports, that basically the Pacific Southwest continues as a now being experienced are not temporary and primarily in the nature of adjustments and readjustments of rapid accumulation of evidence that the Pacific Southwest is now having a solid foundation for continuing prosperity and that there is no likelihood of anything comparable to a depression developing in this territory, in spite of a psychology favorable to such a movement in some circles.

TEMPORARY REVERSES

Temporarily the reverses of agriculture are the cause of some concern. The business situation in the Pacific Southwest has been better in the last five years than in any other period in the history of the section. This is due to the fact that the business situation in the Pacific Southwest has been better in the last five years than in any other period in the history of the section.

FRUIT OUTLOOK

Weather conditions have been moderately favorable during the month for the fruit crop. Valencia oranges have been moving to the markets in heavy volume at fair prices. The lemon crop is very heavy, but the market is not so good. The grape crop is also heavy, but the market is not so good. The fruit crop is also heavy, but the market is not so good.

BANKING

The changes in the banking situation during June have been moderate. The business situation in the Pacific Southwest has been better in the last five years than in any other period in the history of the section.
